Major And Minor Notes

By John Oliver

JOHN OLIVER

INTEREST of music lovers will be focused next week on the University Philharmonic Society and its presentation at Convocation Hall on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of Gilbert and Sullivan's operetta, "The Pirates of Penzance". There will be a matinee on Saturday. Between periods of intensive study in the courses in which they are majoring, the University chorists are mining in literature, history, and science. Gilbertian humor and the tenuous Sullivan, well known violinist and teacher, is conducting the work. Thomas W. Dakin is dramatic director and G. K. Kevan is musical director.

The production will be furnished with attractive scenery and costumes. General opinion among those who have attended recent performances is that this will be one of the loveliest artistic efforts in the history of the Philharmonic Society. "The Pirates" remain one of Gilbert and Sullivan's most popular operas. In "Trial by Jury", there are two great warring characters, the law as the object of their satire in "The Pirates", the person of the sentimental Doctor of Divinity. Then came "The Pirates", to be made the vehicle of good-humored laughter at the expense of the British Navy. In "The Pirates", the starlight of fun was turned upon the Army and the gallant British sea-lords of the peace, the Police. Happier, neither military nor nautical, the "Pirates" found cause for offence in being held up to playful ridicule.

Sullivan contributed one of his finest scores to "The Pirates" as the first presented to the public at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, New York on Dec. 31, 1878, and the first English public performance was at the Opera Comique, London, on April 3, 1880. A private performance was given at Pilsbury, England, Dec. 30, 1879. Of the music, one English critic wrote, after its first performance: "Mr. Sullivan carried out more completely than ever, his original and fanciful idea of caricaturing grand opera. The result is that we have music worthy in its artistic qualities to rank with some of the best efforts of the greatest composers, while it has a piquant freshness and originality such as to other modern musicians has equalled. Our English Aubert has given us nothing so novel in rhythm as the French composer, while there is a gentility in them more welcome than the harsh, crisp accent of the Gallic school today."

Many of the musical numbers are the absolutely perfect examples of what such music should be. Remember, that was written in 1880. The music justifies similar remarks today.

Members of the Edmonton Civic Opera Society have commenced rehearsals for the production of Rudolf Friml's "Vagabond King", which will be presented at the Empire Theatre in March. Mrs. James B. Carmichael, general manager, and Dr. Paul Herveux, artistic director, are in charge. The production is being directed by Henry Asch, who is also director of the Edmonton Civic Opera. The first rehearsal will take place next Wednesday.

Although some members of the cast have been selected, this work is not yet completed. Due to restrictions regarding Canadian entering the United States, notes

Canadian Supply
Office In London
Damaged In Raid

OTTAWA, Jan. 24.—(CP)—London office of the Munitions and Supply Department were seriously damaged in an air raid, Prime Minister Mackenzie King revealed Friday in tabling in the House of Commons the annual report of the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

The report said the offices in St. James Square were seriously damaged during the first season of the "big time," that is "doing nicely, thank you."

Miss Pauline appeared as soloist with the Philharmonic on Jan. 7, singing in Mahler's Fourth Symphony. Howard Taubman, of the music department of the New York Times, was on the occasion.

Mona Pauline young American mezzo-soprano was the vocalist in the last and final movement of the symphony. The young singer said in the front of the orchestra throughout the long three earlier movements, like patience on a moment, but much more decorative.

Wonder what a soloist thinks about all that time. In any case, the song with delicate, charming and childlike innocence, the ideal vein for the music. Already one of the most popular of the younger Met artists and appearing with the Philharmonic during her first season of the "big time," that is "doing nicely, thank you."

Looking them Over

JACK KELLY

LAST night's meeting of the Northern Alberta Fish and Game Protective League, with a reported attendance of some 500 in the Memorial Hall, served as a striking reminder that fishing and hunting are still our two biggest sports so far as actual numbers of participants go. Year in and year out, both in Canada and the United States, more people fish and hunt than take part in any other single sport.

Edmontonians may argue that indoor bowling here has more devotees than the red and green of the fish and the red and white of the gun. For years now this situation has been presented time after time to the Alberta government. Very little has been done to meet the problem of keeping our widely publicized fishing waters full of game fish. One can't help but see a similarity between this situation and the one that led to the founding of Ducks Unlimited by the sportsmen of the United States and Canada.

The governments of the two countries were making little or no provision toward stopping the steady decrease in stocks of wild waterfowl on the continent owing to lack of funds, co-ordination of efforts and a plan of production. All emphasis was on conserving what ducks were left, with little attention to actually producing the numbers needed by the sportsmen of the two countries.

By going about the problem in an efficient, scientific way, Ducks Unlimited is now putting millions more ducks in the air each season. Provision of more and more fireless breeding grounds has been the secret of this success.

Alberta sportsmen might give a thought to the possible formation of a Fish Unlimited organization which would collect its own funds, set up its own hatcheries and sources of supply and see to it that plenty of fish awaited fishermen.

There are probably several thousand Albertans who would gladly donate five or ten dollars a year to such an organization. If it would ensure them fish when they went after them. Fishing trips are fairly expensive and every trout-fishing Albertan has made many without a dollar's worth of tangible results.

The Alberta government probably would co-operate with such a movement to the extent of setting aside certain streams and lakes as a preserve in which one could rely on Fish Unlimited would be allowed to angle. A few seasons would put the organization on its feet financially and its breeding plants could then produce the fish needed by the government for stocking all other available waters in the province.

Highs and Lows From Sportdom

REFUSAL of the Red Cross to approve the proposed National Hockey League benefit game in Boston can hardly be rated very high in human sense. Red tape is being allowed to choke off thousands upon thousands of needed dollars that will not flow into Red Cross coffers in any other way.

Here's a highlight of the week in wise-crack: "I hear there is a demand for older ball players in the majors this year." Ed Roush wrote a friend in Cincinnati. "If the Reds need a good FINISHED ball player, tell them about me!"

It comes out now. Yesterday Buddy Bear started an action for the recovery of $100,000 damages in New Jersey for injuries which he suffered in an automobile accident shortly before his recent disastrous bout with Joe Louis. Bear's counsel explained the start of the suit was delayed until after the fight because of the physical suffering. All details of Buddy's alleged injuries are yet to be disclosed.

Baseball Pours Men Into Armed Services Of America

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Military service, which so far has called some three dozen major leaguers and 300 minor leaguers into uniform, seems sure to determine baseball's pennant races this year and may also decide the all-star game.

The American League has yielded Bob Feller, Hank Greenberg and Ted Travis and clearly will yield Ted Williams to the war effort while the National League has not yet been called to yield a single one of its top-flight performers.

The American League has a number of unwarmed stars, while the National League has a number of war veterans. The latter are mostly former men. Dolf Camilli, the most valuable player of the senior circuit last year, has five children.

On the basis of an unofficial checkup today the American League has 20 players either in the military or on the threshold while the National League has 18. Chicago Cubs have 10 to players, but Washington Senators, already weak, have seven up seven.

This is the roster by club:

AMERICAN LEAGUE
New York: Ken Silvers, catcher; John Sturm, first baseman; Charles Blumens and Steve Fock, pitchers; Cleveland: Bob Feller, pitcher; Clarence Campbell, outfielder.

Washington: Cecil Travis, brother of Ted Travis and clearly will yield; Fred Infielders; Francis Browder, Lewis Thomas and Richard Bannister, outfielders.

Boston: Ted Williams, outfielder; Mickey Harris, Earl Johnson and Larry Poewell, pitchers; Al Plaf, first baseman.

Philadelphia: Sam Chapman, outfielder; Al Brancato, infielder; Ted Cooper, pitcher.

Detroit-Hank Greenberg, outfielder; Fred Hutchinson and Robert Usher, pitchers.

Chicago-Gene Stack, pitcher; St. Louis-George A. Johnson and John Berardino, infielders; Joe Garza and Albert White, outfielders.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Field Hockey Gains Favor With Co-Eds

Field hockey, favorite of English girls' schools, is finding plenty of support among the young nieces of Uncle Sam and here are some pretty co-eds from Pomona college, Pomona, Calif., going through a strenuous workout on the college campus. Left to right, the ball chasers armed with the hooked field hockey sticks are Janette Weir, Elizabeth Heron and Fatty Bierkamp.

Eight Resolutions Passed

Nearly 500 members of the Northern Alberta Fish and Game Protective League heard reports of the league's activities during 1941 at a general meeting of the organization held in the Memorial Hall Friday.

Dr. T. Forrester Macdonald, president of the organization, presided for the first time.

A highly interesting detailed report on the fishing season of 1941 was presented by James Rust, in which he enumerated the streams that have been stocked with fish during the year and progress of fish stocking projects previously undertaken.

TOUGH ON FISHERMEN
The season of 1941 was generally unfavorable for fishing, due chiefly to swollen streams from heavy rain and the fact that many of the streams were closed to fishing.

Rust's report covered an area reaching as far south as Red Deer, where he reported that the province had been stocked with fish by the Jasper National Park.

WANT WHITE TALK
That the provincial government be appointed to have white talk brought into the province.

That the extra license on elk be eliminated.

That the principle of zoning be adopted for the conservation of moose.

That the provincial government approach the conservation of moose with regard to the control of poaching.

That more full time wardens be used in settled areas.

That the provincial government institute a magpie control campaign and that it be under the strict control of the game branch.

NAME REPRESENTATIVES
The meeting selected President Dr. A. Macdonald, Dr. R. A. Rooney, R. W. MacKenzie and George J. Kellic as representatives.

Cincinnati Goes All Out For War

CINCINNATI, Jan. 24.—(AP)—Possessor of a proud record under fire in the First Great War, General Manager Warren C. Giles of Cincinnati Reds has advised his players he would rather close up shop than have even one player of military age "shirk duty with the armed forces."

In a letter made public by Al Lakeman, 200-pound catcher up from Indianapolis—and one of 35 who received copies—Giles counselled:

"I urge every player on the Cincinnati club to take stock of his personal situation, analyze it carefully and ask himself: 'Can I stand at the bat, play the game, public opinion in war time and conscientiously justify good and sufficient reason for not being in government service?'"

Continuing the war-time caption of "Warrior in France wrote: 'If you cannot answer that question in the affirmative, look me straight in the eye and justify in your own heart and mind that you have justifiable reasons . . . then you should not be playing on a professional baseball team during war time.'"

"We are anxious to provide the public with the wholesome recreation of the President's relief fund in the letter to Commissioner LaSalle. We want to put the best club in National League competition to place there. We want to win the pennant and finally the world series."

"We want to do those things, however, with players who are sincere from government service is used for their own heart and mind that you have justifiable reasons . . . then you should not be playing on a professional baseball team during war time."

TODAY'S MESSAGE

By Rev. A. C. ARCHIBALD, D.D.
Minister, First Baptist Church, Calgary.

Dare We Face Ourselves?

THE modern man and the modern Christian stand in grave peril by reason of their unwillingness to face up to themselves. Terms, comprehensive in their implications, have become places of concealment in which the individual may hide. The holy phrase, "The Kingdom of God" and meaning "world movements" have often refused, ignored and in the hands of superficial thinkers, concealed the real individual.

It should go without saying, that there is nothing of world or international politics, without facing up to the individual factor. No agglomeration of men hushes can possibly make a peach orchard. No collection of "True Story" magazines can make a great library. We suffer from a delusion, that if we win this war for our civilization, we have solved our major problem. It is our immediate task, yet all-determining problem of the individual still faces us.

History, present events and personal experience are telling us something about that individual. He has a tragic desire to be a resident within his nature, to have scientific and mechanical processes have lifted us out of our mortal delinquencies. But here is one place where time has not functioned. Moral evil and its consequences, love and hate, good and bad; hope and tragedy—it is all of one evil and one piece, whether it be in Shakespeare or in Homer, in Milton or in John the Baptist. Biography disclosed no fundamental difference between the man of today and the man of three thousand years ago.

We find in all our efforts after goodness and decency, a powerful antagonist; something demonic, tragic, terrible in human nature, that runs our best qualities to ruin and our finest endeavors into failure. It matters not what you call it. Freud called it "the Id" and he says we are born with it. A primitive perversion—a new name cannot eliminate an old fact. A racial inheritance that wrecks our schemes and our efforts, floods our world with tragedy and disappointment. Only fully and deeply aware as we are in the present, will we face up to the future. The future is a form of evil, there is a disease in human nature, which only a profound spiritual experience can cure. "To expect a change in human nature is an act of faith, but to expect a change in human society without it, is an act of lunacy."

This point of view is hard to accept by the modern mind tinged with its Humanistic philosophy. It offends our deep seated pride. That man is powerless to master his own weaknesses comes as a bill of aback. It leads to self-despair. But that is exactly what Christianity asks of us. It recognizes a helpless, perverted human nature, but realizes its own despair before it can make a single advance. Our Gospel has a mighty conviction that it is equal to the demands that such a nature upon it. It can straighten out the radical twist at the center of human nature. When once man has given up his life to God in Christ, he begins a work of remaking, upon that deep, deep, Man gives up his right to react unconsciously in terms of mere self-interest. In Christ every man is a new creature. There is anywhere, at any time, by anyone being offered any other workable remedy? The Christian church has in her keeping the future of our race.

MEET THE HEMINGWAYS

Mrs. Hemingway, glancing through her daily paper, gave a little start of surprise.

"What's this?" she asked. It was a rhetorical question. Mr. Hemingway didn't know. For he was sitting on the other side of the table.

"John, did you see this?" she asked, pointing to an advertisement that filled a full page of the paper.

John peered over his glasses. "Is that the advertisement telling about Alberta Trade-Marked Goods? Yes, I saw it. A mighty good idea, helping to develop Alberta by demanding Alberta Trade-Marked Goods."

"It's just covered with names and trade-marks," continued Mrs. Hemingway. "Are all these companies located right here in Alberta?"

"That's right, Mary. They put out some mighty fine products, too. I buy them sometimes."

But Mrs. Hemingway wasn't listening. "It says that if we demand Alberta Trade-Marked Goods we are helping to develop the resources and industries of our own Province. That makes sense, John."

"Sure it does. I buy Alberta Trade-Marked Goods sometimes."

"And it says, too, that if we use Treasury Transfer Vouchers we'll get a 5 per cent consumer bonus on the value of all Alberta Trade-Marked Goods purchased. John, have we been demanding these goods?"

"Oh, I buy them sometimes." "And have we been getting that 5 per cent bonus, John?"

"Just haven't bothered."

"Butter? Is it a bother to demand the fine products of Alberta manufacturers? And is earning a 5 per cent bonus by using Treasury Vouchers a bother?" John Hemingway, I'm going down to the store right now. And I'm going to take this full page advertisement with me. And I'm going to order the things I want right from it. Then I'm going to tell Mr. Grocer that from now on we're going to settle our account with Treasury Transfer Vouchers. What do you think of that, John Hemingway?"

John smiled fondly. "Mary, you're absolutely right... as always," he said.

HOME SPECIALTIES

In supporting Alberta manufacturers by demanding their Trade-Marked products you have the welfare of two people in mind: the manufacturer and you. We believe Alberta's young industries are worthy of your support and you will appreciate the value of your purchases.

Home Specialties is a new line of products, and you will see what it means.

Owned by Mr. W. A. Openshaw, Home Specialties was established in 1938. The products of the concern include linoleum, waxed and polished, and BORO, the washday wonder.

BORO is a soap powder developed by Mr. Openshaw after seven years of experimenting. It is an all-purpose cleaner and can be used on floors, dishes, paint and woodwork as well as in the tub. Recommended by hundreds of housewives, BORO removes dirt and stains and cleanses clothes whiter, and yet it contains no lye, ammonia or caustic.

BORO is good for all your cleaning. And it's economical too... for a very little goes a long way.

Home Specialties Wax and Polish have a long-wearing, highly-polished, gleaming finish. They are guaranteed to please.

And in linoleum, Home Specialties manufactures Harmony Brand wax and the products, as well as with base and rose water lotions.

The products of Home Specialties are all good... and good for all.

GRANDE PRAIRIE BRICK YARD

With the present capacity the Grande Prairie Brick Yard turns out enough bricks for an average-sized house every day. Now capable of daily producing 10,000 bricks, the yard could increase its output with a few additions and changes. And they will... when the people of Western Canada are in a position to build the home of their dreams.

There's romance in a brick yard. And there's scientific care in its making. Let's see how the Grande Prairie Brick Yard does it.

Raw materials such as sand and clay are found near the plant which is situated on the north bank of the Peace River. After the mud process, the bricks are set separately in drying sheds where they are protected from weather exposure until dry enough to be stacked in the kiln. Clay used by the Grande Prairie Brick Yard has good drying properties, so it does not crack or warp during the drying process.

By a double brick wall and then plastered to make it tight. In it, burning, the most important part of the brick-making process. This requires about 10 days of constant firing during which a compressed column of clay is changed into a hard brick.

Bricks from the Grande Prairie Brick Yard are distributed widely and are used equally well for chimneys and foundations. Many fine structures have been built of Grande Prairie Brick including office buildings, a modern home and private dwellings. They are used successfully for chimneys and other underground work where constant contact with moisture is the supreme test of brick quality. Bricks can do no more than that.

Rules To Make Tires Live To Ripe Old Age Are Given

WHEEL ALIGNMENT SAVES WEAR

TAKE BAD ROADS AT LOW SPEED

Today every motorist wants to make his automobile tires last as long as possible. Because of the rubber shortage and the clamping down of rigid government priorities, the longevity of car tires becomes a matter of acute importance to the nation as well as to the car owners, millions of whom depend on their vehicles for their livelihood. By observing the few simple rules illustrated in this series of photographs, you, Mr. Motorist, can secure the maximum of tire mileage, and thus keep your wheels rolling, save vital rubber needed so badly in equipping the armed forces and at the same time save money for yourself. In addition to observing these simple rules in regard to matters of parking, high speeds, brake use, and tire pressures, it is important to frequently have you trained garage mechanic or filling station repair man check over your tires for personal attention. He can give you valuable pointers as to seasonal care of tires—what pressures to keep in tires in hot weather, in cold, and how to coddle your tires and tubes on long and short trips. The rules illustrated here have been set up for use of the driving public by experts and closely observing them will not only result in needed tire economy but will save lives endangered by blow-outs at high speeds.

Generalissimo In Singapore

Fire In Quebec Construction Camp Claims 15 Lives

Fire which swept through the bunkhouse of a construction camp at Shipshaw, Que., claimed the lives of 15 men and serious injury to 13 others. A coroner's jury, investigating the fire, brought in a verdict of accidental death for the 15 who died in the inferno which completely razed the bunkhouse in which they were sleeping. Ninety-two men used the building as sleeping quarters. Rescue workers are shown searching the ruins for bodies of the victims.

MacDonald Opens Seamen's Home

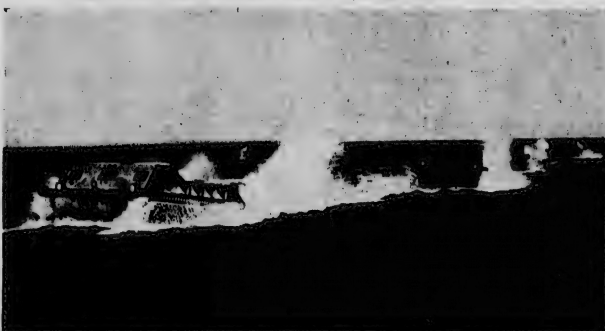

Hon. Angus L. MacDonald is pictured as he officially opened Allied Merchant Seamen's Home of the Navy League at Halifax. "This hostel is a sign and a proof that here he is not forgotten," declared the naval defence minister, referring to the merchant mariners who ply their trade amidst great danger and whose story is one of epic courage. The support of this new Navy League enterprise came from all over Canada. Included in the donations was $80,000 from the British War Relief society of the United States.

The Spirit Of The R.C.A.F.

Described as symbolic of the air force motto, Per Ardua Ad Astra, this striking sculpture group is entitled "The Spirit of the R.C.A.F." The work is by W. Stanley Martineau, Montreal-born sculptor residing in New York. The R.C.A.F. also inspired 25-year-old Martineau's "Wings of Canada," a symbolic figure riding a winged horse.

Amphibian Tanks May Solve Landing Force Problems

Something new in warfare is this formation of tanks built for the navy and used exclusively by the U.S. marines, plowing through the shallow waters of the Gulf of Mexico at 12 miles per hour. The tanks, named the Roebeling Amphibian tanks, are designed for hurricane rescue work, but the navy was quick to realize their possibilities in warfare. It is believed the tanks will be the answer to landing force problems which have been studied for years. The tanks carry 24 men with complete fighting equipment and a crew of three.

R.A.F. Chief Visits Cadets In U.S.
